

'Managing Demographic Risk: The next challenge for UK pensions', a one day conference, Charing Cross Hotel, London, 13th February 2008. This topical conference assesses the challenges under the following subject headings: future trends in longevity; factors in demographic risk; an analyst's view of whether markets can continue to ignore pension liabilities; the views of the FRC and the Pensions Regulator; the market for large transfers of risk; the modes of risk transfer and data and the public domain. This will be a most useful event whether you are looking from the point of view of strategy, product development, marketing, capital or risk management within an insurance firm or bank: managing a pension fund or the corporate treasury within a firm, local authority or large organisation: working for a pension fund or pensions consultant or your focus is that of an actuary or an economist.

Dr David Blake, Professor of Pension Economics, Director of the Pensions Institute, Cass Business School, is one of the expert speakers taking part in this topical event.

This event is CPD accredited by the Pensions Management Institute and the Solicitors Regulation Authority.

- For more information about this event and to book online, please visit <http://www.cityandfinancial.com/conferences/index.asp?id=193> .
- The conference brochure can be downloaded here.